MAKE TRACKS FOR THE ARCTIC OCEAN

Road-trippers, start your engines. Beginning in November 2017, you could be driving to the Arctic Ocean. Work almost complete on the Inuvik to Tuktoyaktuk Highway – a 120-kilometre all-weather road from Inuvik, at the terminus of the Dempsey Highway, to the Inuvialuit town of Tuktoyaktuk on the shores of the Arctic Ocean. Adventurous drivers will be cruising this route by the end of 2017. What can they expect? Herds of wild caribou and domestic reindeer, sweeping tundra and “pingo” hills, and waters rippling with Arctic fish, fowl and beluga whales. WWW.ITH.DOT.GOV.NT.CA

SAMPLE SUDS AT THE WILDEST BREWPUB

The only one of its kind in the Northwest Territories, Yellowknife's new Woodyard Brewhouse has quickly become a hit with thirsty visitors. Located in the city's offbeat Old Town neighbourhood, just steps from Great Slave Lake, the taps flow with beers from the wild frontier, including Bent Prop Ale, Ragged Ass Pine and Bug Repellent IPA. An outdoor patio lets you quaff in the midnight sun. WWW.NWTBREWINGCO.COM

HOTPOT: FLAVOUR AT YOUR MERCY

The traditional do-it-yourself dish is as much about the experience as it is about dinner. Diners start with their own individual hot pot with a small burner below and a choice of two broths (spicy and original). Added items are chosen from a tablet menu, via photos of raw lamb, beef or prawns, and veggies like Chinese cabbage, bok choy and sweet potato. The artful pots and wall decor of traditional paper cutting techniques bring the eastern style to the territory.
