TUNDRA NORTH TOURS – CANADIAN ARCTIC REINDEER

A vast herd of 3,000 reindeer moves slowly, like a living river, across the stark, snowy tundra. Follow in their footsteps as they travel towards their spring calving grounds. See shimmering northern lights shoot across the horizon as you head for the night into an igloo you helped build. Mush your own dog team, smoke fish and share a feast cooked by Inuvik elders while chatting with them about traditional life. Take part in old-time games, dances and songs and feel the connection these people have with the Arctic's creatures and wide-open spaces. For over a decade, Kylik Kisoun Taylor of Tundra North Tours has been introducing visitors to the spectacular North. An Inuvialuit/Gwich'in from Inuvik whose grandparents lived a traditional lifestyle, Kylik is passionate about sharing insights about his world. "People come here seeking to connect with untouched wilderness and experience other cultures," he says. "They leave transformed."

In winter, skate on the frozen lake, stomp off on snowshoes or hop on a snowmobile and experience the wide-open Northern backcountry. Sit down to local northern cuisine like bison and pike. Then slip into the hot tub and watch curtains of Northern Lights shimmer and loop across the horizon– fireworks on a cosmic scale. Once you dive under your down duvet for the night, drift to sleep knowing you've signed up for the "Aurorawatch" service – to be awakened should the Aurora Borealis come to life while you're dreaming.
